

LOOKING AT LINCOLN

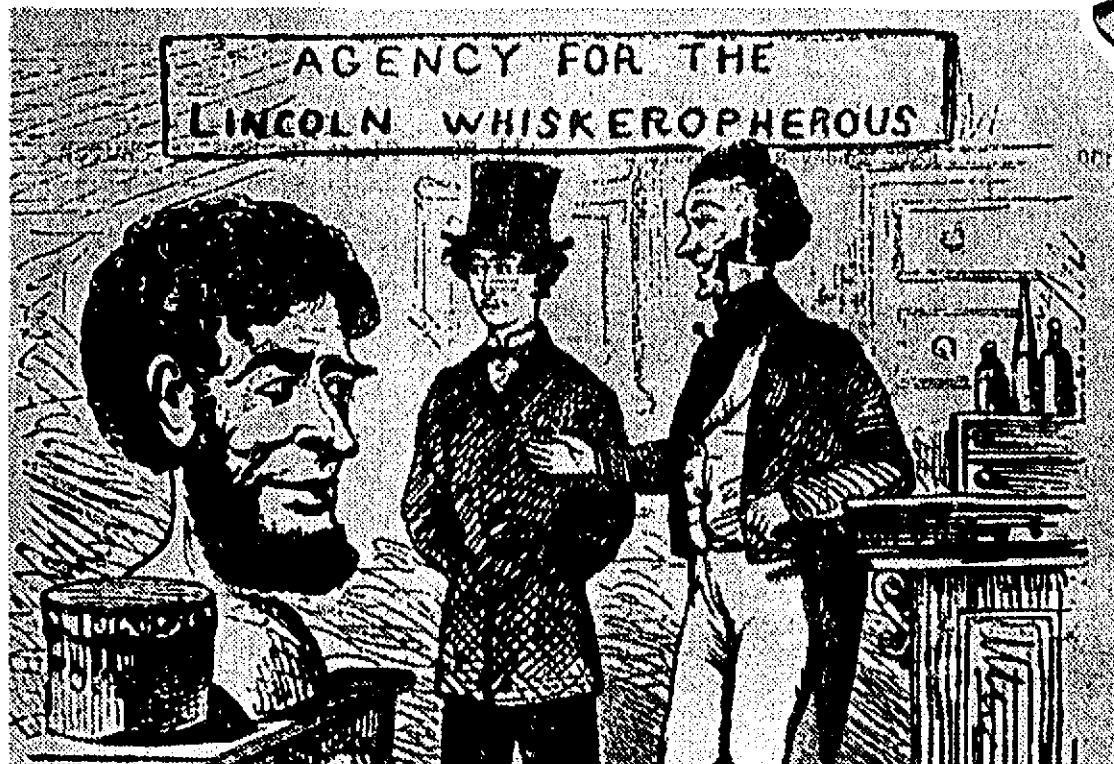

This Week's PICTURE SHOW—AP Newsfeatures.

Through the years, Abraham Lincoln has taken his place in history as a stern leader, one concerned with the welfare of his countrymen. For his present day admirers, it is hard to believe he was as much maligned and caricatured in his own time as our current president at times might be. Here, in a series of political cartoons published during the Civil War period, Lincoln is reflected from the eyes of those artists in varying lights of acceptance or hostility.

Lincoln's statement concerning the uncomfortable position of his office brought this Frank Leslie work, titled "A Presidential-elect's Uncomfortable Seat" into publication March 2, 1861, showing the President-elect on the points of many rifle bayonets.

"Mr. Lincoln Sets a Style" appeared March 16, 1861. It depicts a druggist who holds the agency for the Lincoln "whiskeropherous", who advises a visitor to try the product and, in three weeks, be as hairy and handsome as Lincoln.

"A Job for the New Cabinet Maker" was Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly, Feb. 2, 1861, way of saying Lincoln had a job cut out for him patching up the break between North and South.

Published March 9, 1861, this parody, entitled "The Mac Lincoln Harrisburg Highland Fling" mocked the night trip made by Lincoln from Harrisburg, Pa., to Washington to escape possible assassination, wearing a Scotch cap on the trip.

When New York responded to the draft law with riots, Frank Leslie, on Aug. 29, 1863, brought out Lincoln as a confused "Mammy", trying to cope with "The Naughty Boy Gotham, Who Would Not Take The Draft".

"Long Abraham a Little Longer", drawn by Frank Bellew, expressed the relief which local northerners welcomed Lincoln's re-election. It appeared in Harper's Weekly Nov. 17, 1864.

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help US!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help US! this newspaper.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME

Dear Helen: I've been going with a real nice girl for six months. The problem is her father. He won't let her go out more than once a week and she's got to get home before 10:30. We can't even see a double feature movie. Dances are out. He doesn't approve of them. She can't have friends in to visit, or talk on the telephone.

He thinks the places where teens meet to eat and talk are sex-and-sin joints, though most of them around here are so strict they even check the age of kids smoking cigarettes.

For even raising her voice, she's grounded. I never know when she'll call and say, "I can't make it tonight." We never plan ahead because he uses these plans to blackmail her. Sometimes she's working on the extra jobs he makes for her right up until the minute I ring the doorbell - and if she isn't finished, I can't even stay to help her. He's so mean and condescending I'd like to take a poke at him.

She's almost 18. She's shy and unsure of herself; and I want to help her, but how? Don't say, "Talk to her father." He expects obedience without question - or she gets the belt, - GARY

Dear Gary: Any "help" you might offer - in your present mood - would only get your girl in deeper trouble, and she has enough problems already.

But her father has more! She can soon leave and build a good life of her own. He must live with himself the rest of his days - and I fear they'll be lonely ones. Your best help: build up her self-assurance and courage so that she won't be afraid to move out, when the time comes. - H

Dear Helen: I'm 12 years old. Near our house is a church that holds dances for kids from ages 11 to 17. But hardly any older kids go, and if they do they stay in their own groups, as they don't want to associate with what they call "the punks." It's well chaperoned. All my junior hi friends are allowed to go there. Well, last year I asked my mother if I could, and she said, "Wait till you're 12." Here I am, and now it's, "Wait another year."

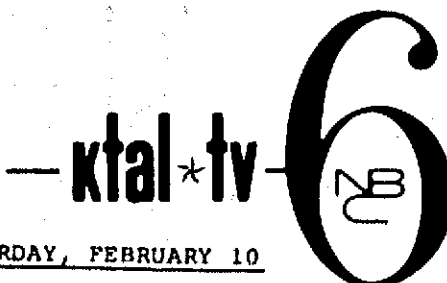

Don't get me wrong. My mother is a wonderful and pretty woman, but stubborn. How can I make her see the dances are safe and fun? - LOST CAUSE

Dear L. C.: Why not get your mother to serve as chaperone for a few dances? If this doesn't budge her - well, 13 is a good year for "safe fun" - and plenty soon. - H

Dear Helen: I'm a 16-year-old girl with no father. He died when I was nine. All girls should have a father. I miss mine terribly. I met a boy who is just wonderful. He was like a father, except younger. At school we hit it off real well, and then asked me out on a date. He was so sweet and understanding that I guess I talked too much. But I couldn't help it. He even looks like pictures of my father. So I told him my problems like I might have to my Dad. He hasn't called me since and when I see him at school, he's with a real pretty girl. What did I do wrong? - LONESOME

Dear Lonesome: I'd guess you scared this boy away with your Father hang-up. All girls need one, true, but if they confuse "boyfriend" with "Dad," they end up lonely for both. - H

May Replace Pine With Cacti

HOUSTON (AP) - In December Carter Jamison, 46, decorated a large pine tree in his yard with Christmas lights. Three days before Christmas someone cut the tree down and hauled it away. Jamison replaced it with two small pines. They too vanished. He planted two more pines, and someone stole them. Jamison said Wednesday he is now considering replacing the pine with cacti.

nuses." North and the referee laughed. Trezel, sitting West, joined in the laughter while Jais, sitting East, remained silent and looked very grave.

South went into a huddle after playing the ace of hearts and called for dummy's king of diamonds. When Trezel showed out, Jais turned to South and asked, "How did you know?"

South replied, "I always play queen over the jack," and proceeded to make his slam. At the other table, France also reached six no-trump. The French South gave the hand the classic play of trying the club finesse at trick two. Then, after winning the second heart, he played out all his spades and clubs in an effort to obtain a count. Finally, he went wrong in diamonds and was down three.

After the match, which France won rather handily, in spite of this hand, when he was accepting congratulations Jais asked once more, "How did you know?"

The American tried to shrug it off, but Jais knew that he must have had some very good reason to play diamonds before he had to do so. The reason was that Jais was obviously trying to look like a man with the queen of diamonds, while Trezel was trying to look like a man who didn't have it, and the American just decided to believe both of them.

Miss Fleming Far Ahead in Skating

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
GRENABLE, France (AP)—America's Peggy Fleming would have to fall 20 times and wind up landing on her ear to lose the Olympic gold medal in the ladies' free-style figure skating final Saturday, her rivals conceded today.

"Peggy—she is much too good. No one has a chance to catch her," said Gabrielle Seyfert of East Germany, who placed second to Miss Fleming in the compulsory figures completed Thursday.

Tracing five figures brilliantly, the 19-year-old ice ballerina from Colorado Springs, Colo., rolled up 1,062.1 points to 984.9 for Miss Seyfert, 960.0 for Austria's Beatrix Schuba, and 943.2 for Hans Maskova, the European champion from Czechoslovakia.

Miss Maskova, 18, a student at Prague and a shapely, brown-eyed brunette who has been labeled the prettiest girl in the 10th Winter Olympics, joined in the raves for her American opponent.

"Peggy is a marvelous free skater and she will win quite easily," admitted the Czech girl. "The only competition is for the silver and bronze medals."

Ladies' figure skating normally is full of politics and petty jealousies. Contestants can be as catty as a houseful of sorority sisters. But around the Stade de Glace, scene of the figure skating event, you can't find a sour word for the slim American champion.

Kasumi Yamashita, one of the three pretty and talented Japanese skaters, put it very succinctly:

"Peggy is very gracious (graceful). Her jumps are high and stable. She is the best."

Karen Magnusson, the 15-year-old Canadian champion from Vancouver, said, "Peggy is absolutely beautiful. She does everything wonderfully—the figures and the free skating."

Miss Schuba, 16, her blonde hair tied in a bun, laughed when someone asked if she, in third place, had a chance of making up the difference in free skating.

"Oh, no, no," she insisted. "It is impossible. We have no chance."

Even the Russians admitted that Miss Fleming was the sport's unparalleled queen.

"Peggy, she is way up here," Elena Cheglova of the Soviet Union said through an interpreter, lifting one hand above her head. "And the rest of us—we are way down here."

Petra Ruhmann of Germany, after watching Peggy trace the last of five figures, commented, "When she skates, we all rush to the edge of the rink to watch her perform."

When Peggy's name is announced, an electric charge seems to go through the big, glassed-in arena. Spectators who have been chatting casually and paying little attention to the other competitors suddenly come alive. There is a rustling movement.

People rush to vantage points. Some pull out cameras. Others hug the plastic edge of the rink. They watch in quiet appreciation.

Almost everybody says in one language or another, "She's sensational!"

DICK McGUIRE yawns and his wife, Terry, seems to be wondering what all the noise is about as the couple attended a recent pro basketball game at Madison Square Garden. Dick was fired in December as coach of the New York Knicks. Terry said he is more relaxed since his dismissal. That is evident.

Both Hope Teams Post Victories

By RALPH ROUTON
Star Sports Writer

In what could be called a real "must" game, the Hope Bobcats showed what they were made of, outlasting the Texarkana Washington Lions 65-59 in overtime last night at Jones Field House.

For Hope it was an important district win, setting the Cats at 3-6 in 4-AA West, while knocking Washington to 5-4 and two games behind the league-leading Fairview Cardinals. But more than anything, the Bobcats showed their ability to come back.

With both teams traveling a mile a minute up and down the floor, the Cats nearly blew Washington out of the gym for three minutes. Suddenly Hope was ahead 10-4 and could do no wrong. Things took a quick reversal, though, and the Lions hit ten straight points.

Now the Bobcats were giving up the ball on floor errors, and by the end of the quarter Texarkana Washington had the Bobcats down 20-13.

Soon the deficit had upped to eight points, but with six minutes left in the half the tide began swaying back to Hope. Munching the lead down to within three points several times, the Cats still seemed to have wasted the effort when the Lions took a 30-22 margin shortly before the half.

However, Larry East hit a couple of free throws, and when it was all over at intermission the Bobcats were only trailing 30-27.

In the third period the rejuvenation which Hope has undertaken for the last few weeks finally caught fire. Both clubs hit a flurry at the period's end, and the buzzer found it stacked up at 47-41.

With 6:55 to play the Bobcats took the lead 50-49 on a technical foul against the Washington coach. Before the Lions could call time out Hope led 56-50 with 2:45 to go. They maneuvered slightly, but still the Bobcats led 57-53 with 1:14 left.

Here came Texarkana Washington in one big whirl, and they tied it up 57-57 with twenty seconds to be transpired. Hope had the ball, but couldn't get the shot off, and we had the season's first overtime.

Senior Richard Sallee hit two jumpers of 20 and 15 feet to set the Bobcats out to 61-57 early, but Welton Williams hit from 25 feet to cut the lead to a field goal. Larry East sank a pair of charity shots to widen the cushion, but the clincher came a few seconds later. John Henley came up with one of his many steals, and a perfect pass gave Ricky Putman the crisp shot that ended it.

East sacked up 25 big points to lead the Bobcats, but Sallee hit 13 and Putman 11 to help out tremendously. Dwight Gallo-way accounted for 7, and Henley and Danny Reyenga added 3 each. Ernest Love had 16, Pete Chen-ten 11, and Eddie Stewart 10 for Washington.

The junior game also had a happy ending, as the Hope Bobkittens won their first district contest of the year, clumping the Washington juniors 32-26.

Forcing the visitors to play a slow, deliberate style of ball, the Kittens simply overran Washington in the second half after trailing 15-12 at intermission. Another factor in the win was that the Bobkittens maintained good control of the backboards throughout, and were able to fight for position easier.

Parker Powell led the Bobkittens with 9 points, and Bill Lee and Lynn Norton knotted 8 apiece. Charles Raleiff recorded 3, Ricky Jones had 12 and Walton Camele 6 to pace Washington.

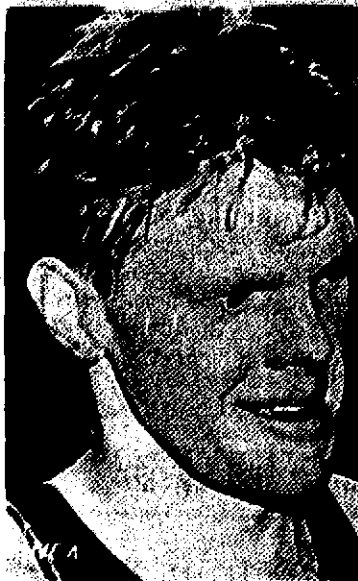

Tonight both the Bobkittens and the Bobcats try to lengthen their winning strings, playing host to the rough Camden Lincoln Wildcats in Jones Field House, beginning at 6:30 p.m. And if the locals show any of the hustle they all displayed last night, they deserve to win and should win.

Hall-of-Famers Recall Big Garden Moments

BOB KURLAND
Oklahoma A & M

"It was the night of the finals of the 1948 Olympic play-off tournament. I was out of college and playing with the Phillips 66 team against the University of Kentucky. They had guys like Alex Groza, Ralph Beard and Wally Jones. The winner of the game was supposed to place five men on the Olympic team. It was a close game and we won. I had something like 25 points."

ANGELO (HANK) LUISETTI
Stanford University

"It was Christmas week, 1936. West Coast teams never did well in the East. Well, we played five games and won them all. The climax came at the Garden when we decisively beat Long Island University, which had won 42 straight. I scored 15 or 16 points—high-scoring then—and also gained some fame because of my one-handed jump shot, unusual in those days."

TOM GOLA
LaSalle College, San Francisco Warriors and New York Knicks

"The whole week of the 1952 NIT tournament stands out in my memory. I was an 18-year-old freshman eligible for varsity play because of the Korean War. Here I was playing before 18,000 people in the No. 1 basketball city and arena in the world. We won the tournament and I was named MVP, along with my teammate Norm Grekin."

BOB PETTIT
Louisiana State University and St. Louis Hawks

"For a basketball player, the Garden is like playing Hamlet—it's the tops he could hope for. My biggest thrill was the first time I played there. It was the 1954 East-West College Shrine game. I played center for the East and, although we lost, it was a great experience. My teammates were Frank Ramsey, Cliff Hagan, Frank Selvy and Togo Palazzi."

OSCAR ROBERTSON
University of Cincinnati and Cincinnati Royals

"It would be impossible to say. Maybe when I was in college I could have come up with one. But a lot of that rah-rah stuff was worn off since coming to the pros. The night I scored 56 points against Iowa when I was a college sophomore was exciting. But the biggest thrill has been just playing in such an historic place. I'm honored to have been a part of it."

'Human Side Is Out of Sports'—Miller

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Writer

WILLY: Like a young god. Hercules—something like that. And the sun, the sun all around him. Remember how he waved to me? Right up from the field, with the representa-tives of three colleges standing by? And the buyers I brought, and the cheers when they came out—Loman, Loman, Loman! God Almighty, he'll be great yet. A star like that, magnificent, can never really fade away.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Arthur Miller, 52, is one of the most successful playwrights in the history of the American theater. His hits include Death of a Salesman, The Crucible and All My Sons. He is now directing his new Broadway play, The Price.

As a youth growing up in Brooklyn, Mr. Miller avidly participated in athletics and was an enthusiastic follower of the sports scene.

Interviewer: "Mr. Miller, do you still have time for sports?"

Mr. Miller: "I play tennis as much as I can, but on a purely amateur basis. I have almost no interest in the big spectator sports any more. Oh, once in awhile something or other will penetrate my haze, but rarely. Now, I just see the commercial side of it. There doesn't seem to be any humanity left in big-time sports."

Does this hold true for college athletics?

Mr. Miller: "On those bowl-type schools it does. People go to watch a machine operate. They admire the efficiency with which it was put together. That wipes out connection between spectator and team. The human side is out."

(In "Death of a Salesman," Willy Loman's son Biff, a former high school football star, has been unsuccessful in making the adjustment to the outside world.)

(WILLY: "Confidentially, desperately. 'You were his friend, his boyhood friend. There's something I don't understand about it. His life ended after that Ebbets Field game. From the age of seven-teen nothing good ever happened to him.")

(BERNARD: "He never trained himself for anything.")

How does the commercialization of sport, even amateur sport, affect the athlete?

Mr. Miller: "People still worship the star athlete as though he were a physical god. Athletes are the glory of some elements of society. And this is a pity. The athlete has to live up to his glorification and to the commercialization of the machine he is a part of. The gate depends on his performance. That puts a squeeze on him. Ultimately he gets chewed up by it. It's like being a ballerina. He can't make a mistake. He can't trip up. That can drive a guy nuts."

What is your reaction to the tremendous growth of football in America?

Mr. Miller: "Football is a metaphor for violence and war, both of which are very big in our society today. Baseball interest is declining because it's too civilized. God knows it's neurotic, too, but not as neurotic as football."

How did you benefit from sports in your boyhood?

Mr. Miller: "I was swept up in it. I was a starting end on my high school team, Abraham Lincoln in Brooklyn. It was a terrible team and I was as good as everyone else. I was six feet tall and weighed 125 pounds. But I was all will. Then I went to the University of Michigan. Of course, I didn't go out for the team. I would have busted all my bones. But the thing I enjoyed about that high school team was the comradeship of my teammates. That's the beauty of athletics."

Interviewer: "What other sports interested you then?"

Mr. Miller: "I was wild for the baseball guys, especially the Yankees and Gehrig. Ruth. Bob Meusel. I liked to play baseball, too, and ice hockey. I think my favorite, though was track. I liked to run. Maybe I felt I was running away from something."

The guy I idolized most was that track star. What's that old bird's name. My God, to think I would have forgotten his name. You know, he was called the fastest human. He once ran 30 yards against a race horse and beat him. At the time I thought that was the greatest thing that ever happened."

At the time, Jesse Owens probably thought so, too.

Ball Boy to Hero

NEW YORK—(NEA)—When Manuel Santana chased tennis balls at the Club Velasquez in his home town of Madrid, his amateur status was zealously protected. Manolo, as he's called, worked for no money.

Sometimes the members of the club would throw him a few pesetas and Manolo would take them home to his widowed mother.

That was 15 years ago, and Santana, the No. 1 tennis player of Spain (and maybe the world), is still an amateur. Now he doesn't chase the balls—he hits them.

In the mysterious processes by which amateur tennis works, Manolo has been able to get married and raise a couple of kids, Manuel Jr. and Beatrice, and travel to every continent of the world. The life is good, and he intends to keep it that way.

There was this bash at Toots Shor's to announce that Manolo is in New York for the next five months to train "as an executive" for Philip Morris, which already has in its employ such amateurs as Arthur Ashe. Manolo, whose toothy smile shields a pair of black, arching eyebrows, kissed the hands of the ladies, which is not bad for the son of an electrician.

"I am here to work," announced Manolo, "—and to play tennis." Not specifying the order of preference.

If and when open tennis becomes an actuality, Santana automatically becomes an anachronism. He intends to stay simon-pure because it makes him a big man in Spain, which even transcends money in importance. Last year, for instance, he was awarded the "Isabel la Catolica"—an honor which generally goes to foreign ministers and dignitaries of that ilk.

Manolo has been an ambassador-at-large in carrying the glories of Spain to all corners of the world. Within the borders of his own country, Santana almost rivals Manolito as a folk hero. Tennis has boomed south of the Pyrenees because of television. There are only two channels in Spain, and when Manolo plays a match in the early afternoon, both of them carry it and all of Spain is watching.

In Madrid, he has already forfeited his privacy as a celebrity. He ranks right up there with El Cordobes and Palo Camino, a couple of the boys who fight the bulls, as an autograph. But their world is not for Manolo.

"I am a coward," smiled Santana. He is also a realist. Since Wimbledon, the most prestigious tournament in the world, will go open this spring, there has been some pressure on Santana to enter because of his seniority among the amateurs.

"I only play," he said, "if the Spanish association tells me." And so far there is no indication that Spain will let its most worthy representative be tainted by pro contacts. Besides, Manolo has no illusions about the type of competition he would offer the pros.

"I think," he said, "they're 10 times better than me." The 29-year-old Spaniard is satisfied that other guys turn pro—like the wholesale defection of Australian amateurs—because it means he can sulk around a couple of years longer and engage in his favorite pursuit, Davis Cup play.

"We are really tired to see Australia win all the time," Manolo noted. "Now I try to win Davis Cup."

He attached a qualifying note.

"America," he added, "has the best players because no one of them has turned professional yet. In Australia, there is only Bill Bowrey and maybe Roy Emerson if he is not too old and decides to keep playing."

"But the top amateurs in the world are Charles Pasarell and Arthur Ashe."

There was ever so slight a blush of modesty on Manolo's face as he said it.

Little Snow But She Can Ski

CHAMROUSSE, France (AP)—Felicity "Bunny" Field of Great Britain was asked during downhill training where she usually skis back home.

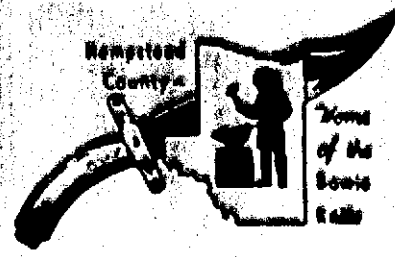

"Oh," she replied, "most people think you have to go clear to Scotland to ski, but that's not true. I often go to Box Hill in Surrey."

And how much snow do they

Children's Clinic Is Held Here

Dr. Betty Lowe, Texarkana pediatrician, examines Travis Powell while his mother watches.

Dr. Charles G. Smith, Texarkana orthopedic, looks over Greg Monroe of Horatio. Mrs. Ruby Hinkle of the Department of Public Health, Little Rock was the Orthopedic Nursing consultant.

Can't Answer Roll Right Either

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — State Sen. Oscar Alagood of Little Rock passed a telegram around the Senate Wednesday, sent by one of his constituents, it said. "Opening session was a great disappointment. Please do better for Arkansas, Help the governor."

The only thing the Senate did when it convened Monday was to answer the roll call.

"Apparently," Alagood said, "I can't even answer the roll call right."

Inventor Is Honored

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The Safety Engineering Club of Baltimore honored inventor Charles Adler Jr., 68, Thursday night on the 40th anniversary of the first traffic-actuated traffic signal.

It was invented by Adler and installed in Baltimore in 1928. Adler was given a silver-enameled replica of his first traffic signal. The inventor also devised the first American train-actuated signal crossing. He has more than 60 patents to his credit.

Finally Gets That License

STEVENS POINT, Wis. (AP) — Mrs. Pierrette Strong finally got her Wisconsin driver's license, courtesy of a U.S. Marine stationed in Vietnam.

She applied for the license Jan. 2. It came Wednesday in a letter from Cpl. M. J. Zuffa.

"I received this license from Madison by mistake," Zuffa wrote from Da Nang. "I hope that the state's little blunder hasn't caused you any inconvenience."

Death Toll in Week Is 920 GIs

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — U.S. warplanes riddled the Haiphong area Friday for the first time in a month, apparently ending a bombing restraint ordered by President Johnson while American officials looked into peace prospects.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk indicated that the peace probe ended after the Communists launched their biggest offensive of the war Jan. 30.

Fighting from that Red campaign against major South Vietnamese cities has died out in all but Hue and Saigon, where the allies reported some success in efforts to clear out Communist-held areas.

The U.S. Command said the Communist death toll climbed by 1,085 Friday, reaching a total of 27,706 since Jan. 29. The allied death toll was reported as 2,707, including 920 Americans, 1,733 South Vietnamese and 54 other allies.

The President's bombing ban applied to the areas around Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital, and Haiphong, the key port city, officials in Washington said.

The American raid Friday was on the Cat Bi airfield, four miles southeast of Haiphong. Navy A6 Intruder pilots said strings of 1,000-pound bombs cut across the intersection of runways. But heavy overcast and darkness prevented further damage assessment.

Other air targets included the Uong Bi electric power plant 15 miles north of Haiphong, a transshipment point 35 miles southwest of the port, the Kep airfield 38 miles northeast of Hanoi and an army barracks 65 miles northwest of the capital.

Washington reports said Johnson ordered the bombing restraint early in January, and American officials looked for signs that the Hanoi government would respond by leveling off military activity to open the way for peace talks.

February, a Month of Many Things American, This Includes Music

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

February is very much a month of many things American, not the least of which is American music. For instance, George Washington was always interested in music, often attended concerts, and was probably familiar with such songs of his day as "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," and "O Dear, What Can the Matter Be." He also provided a musical education for his stepchildren and their children.

Francis Hopkinson was the only musician of note to sign the Declaration of Independence. (He was not only a musician, but he was Washington's legal adviser, the first Secretary of the Navy, a satirist, poet, inventor, and painter.) When he was 22 years of age, he wrote his first song, "My Days Have Been So Wondrous Free," the first secular song written in America.

Thomas Jefferson loved music deeply. He was a skilled violinist and practiced faithfully from the time he was a child until an accident to his wrist made playing impossible. He is said to have practiced 3 hours a day for 12 years and was fond of playing duets with Patrick Henry or with John Tyler. (Whether fact or fable is not known, but a story was that Patrick Henry was the worst violinist in Virginia next to Thomas Jefferson.)

The music of the era during the War Between the States was greatly enjoyed by Abraham Lincoln, whether it was "Dixie," "Yankee Doodle," or "Hail Columbia." Then, after Lincoln's assassination, a great amount of music was composed that included 50 funeral marches and more than 30 memorial songs.

Of the many types and styles of music that we in America enjoy, the folk song is probably the most genuinely American. The folk song is one known and sung by all the people. It lives for generations. The folk music of the Negroes, Indians, cowboys, mountaineers, and lumberjacks are usually considered American folk music.

Play-party songs and games were the delight of children and courting couples in particular in the early days. These ranged from "Skip to My Lou" and "Frog Went a Courting," to "If Ain't Gonna Rain No More" and "Arkansas Traveler." And, of course, there have always been love songs.

But with this difference. In pioneer days it was necessary for a young man to court the young woman of his choice in the presence of the whole family because there was but the one room log cabin for all of them. Since he was often too shy to "speak his mind," he would sing as he rode up the valley toward the home of his loved one such tunes as "Down in the Valley" and "The Lonesome Dove." Again, as he rode away the expression of his love would echo back to her in song.

Probably the one person who has done the most to preserve the heritage of folk music in America is John A. Lomax. Thanks to him "Home On The Range" was rescued from obscurity and many, many more songs now found in the Library of Congress in the Archive of American Folk Music.

Folk singers have now come into the spotlight again. Only a few days ago, February 5, Arkansas folk singer Jimmy Driftwood of Timbo appeared in Little Rock under the sponsorship of the Pulaski County Racketsack Folklore Society, in a program of these songs.

If you "hear America singing" songs of the present day or of our early heritage, they will probably be folk songs. The President of the National Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. Maurice Honigman of Gastonia, N. C., is probably well acquainted with folk music as well as other kinds. She said in a message to the Federation, "(music) is a great dynamic force in the making of a more harmonious world."

Fluoridation Is an Issue

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Pine Bluff Mayor Austin Franks said Thursday that fluoridation of city water would probably be on the ballot in the November general election.

The City Council passed an ordinance in December providing for the fluoridation but opponents of fluoride forced a referendum by securing 4,000 names on petitions.

Blames State Money Problem on Rockefeller

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — State Rep. Marion Crank of Foreman said Thursday night the state had financial problems because Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller had allowed state agencies to "go merrily along" and establish their own budgets several months ago.

Crank also told a meeting of the Sebastian County Young Democrats that the chief executive should be someone "that can make a real tough decision."

Crank said he felt that the Republican administration had failed to adopt a "sensible program" in the state Welfare Department. He said welfare rolls had increased by 4,000 or 5,000 persons and that the benefits would be about $700,000 more than the welfare budget.

Crank, the majority leader in the House, was asked if he would be a gubernatorial candidate on the Democratic ticket this year.

Women Status Head Named

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller Thursday appointed Mrs. Leona Troxell of Rosebud as chairman of his Commission on the Status of Women.

Rockefeller established the commission Thursday and ordered it to make a report by Dec. 1 on the differences in legal treatment of men and women with regard to political, civil and property rights and practices in education, government employment and family relations.

U.S. Expects New Attacks on Cities

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top U.S. officials expect Communist forces to launch a second wave of attacks against the cities and towns of South Vietnam but say enemy losses in the first offensive have been so heavy the new onslaught should be weaker.

The offensive which began Jan. 31 is considered by officials in Washington to have resulted in a costly military defeat for the Viet Cong.

This assessment is based not only on their reported casualties but on their failure to hold any of the 36 provincial capitals and 64 district towns they invaded.

Officials said that on the basis of information from prisoners and documents captured in the fighting they are convinced the V.C. intended to hold many population centers and to set off a popular uprising. Presumably they would have the same objective in the expected new drive.

The hope of the Communist leadership in Hanoi of starting an uprising against the Saigon government is described as puzzling. Some high U.S. officials say Hanoi may be out of touch with reality of the war in the South—at least as U.S. leaders see it.

They concede that the U.S. leadership may be 10 per cent wrong in its judgements about how the conflict is going but argue that the leadership in Hanoi may be as much as 80 per cent wrong.

Authorities believe U.S. and South Vietnamese forces are in a better state of readiness for the expected second wave than they were for the first.

This is attributed partly to the high state of alert on which these forces are being kept and partly to the heavy enemy casualties, which Washington authorities put at 25,000 killed and 5,000 captured.

Germany, U.S. Drop Plane Plans

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and West Germany reportedly are dropping joint development of a revolutionary new jet fighter that could take off and land vertically.

Although the project has involved only about $6 million so far, sources reporting its abandonment said it could have led to contracts worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

There was no immediate word on the reason for the action but some sources suggested the money pinch stemming from the Vietnam war may have been a factor.

The U.S.—West German effort has been one of a number of projects the Pentagon has been supporting for years in the vertical takeoff and landing field. The results so far have been disappointing to many defense officials.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara told Congress last week that during the last seven years the Pentagon and the armed services have invested a total of several hundred million dollars in development and construction of a wide variety of prototype aircraft, using different design approaches to vertical and short take-off and landing.

"None of them proved to be both technically and operationally feasible," McNamara said.

He further told Congress that until a suitable engine is developed none of the approaches seemed likely to produce a successful plane.

The type of aircraft that can take off straight up and land straight down or fly off a short field is considered important for the kind of fighting that is done in underdeveloped countries such as South Vietnam where the United States has had to install an expensive complex of air bases.

Despite dropping of the U.S.—German project, sources said technology on such planes will continue in both countries.

Abortion Law Seems to Be Working

By LOUDON KELLY
Associated Press Writer

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — A year ago the chambers of the Colorado Legislature rang and rumbled with the most acrimonious debate that has bounced off the old marble walls in many years.

There were outcries that Colorado would be turned into "an abortion mecca." Catholic mothers with baby carriages picketed outside the state Capitol. Newspapers sizzled from heated letters to the editor.

But once the uproar died down the General Assembly passed a liberalized abortion bill—the first of its kind in the nation.

Gov. John A. Love, after what he admitted was considerable soul searching, finally signed the bill into law last April 25.

In the weeks that followed Colorado doctors, hospitals, legislators and state officials received hundreds of letters and telephone calls from women, mostly in other states, asking about the chances of getting abortions.

But controls in the law are strict and most out-of-staters seeking to end pregnancies have been doomed to disappointment. Richard D. Lamm, Denver State representative who was the chief sponsor of the abortion bill, says he sees no danger now that Colorado will become "an obstetrical Las Vegas."

Sam T. Taylor, a veteran State senator from Walsenburg, led the unsuccessful battle against the bill last year. He was among those who contended the law would convert the state into "an abortion mecca."
